Micronutrient
Support Services™

Since 1996, the dedicated team at Micronutrient Support Services™ have been working with and training physicians, and have helped more people successfully transition from medications to micronutrient therapies than any other organization in the world.

Reducing medication can be tricky, and serious: you shouldn't do it alone. In regards to reducing psychotropic medication dosages, Dr. Ross J. Baldessarini, professor of psychiatry and neuroscience at Harvard Medical School says "...Stopping abruptly or "cold turkey" can cause a variety of distressing reactions, ranging from mild to moderate early discontinuation symptoms with antidepressants, rapid return of the illness being treated, or even potentially life-threatening seizures with a high dose of benzodiazepines."

There is an answer

You can work with the Support Representatives at Micronutrient Support Services™ to transition safely and comfortably from psychotropic medications to micronutrients.
